SOLOMON LEPLY
WAS NOT DROPPED.Alleged Sensation Sprung
by Local Paper Proves
"False Alarm."

CLERK BIXLER WAS TO BLAME

And Frankly Admits It Was His Mistake That Caused Mr. Lepley's
Name to Be Left From Committee
Story Without Foundation.

In its futile efforts to discredit the present administration in Town Council, a local paper has succeeded in getting one stalwart Democrat in trouble. The victim is Clerk of Council A. O. Bixler. Yesterday the Daily News put a scare head on the fact that Solomon Lepley, a member of Council, had been dropped from all committees out of "spite," because he would not "line up" with the organization. For an opposition paper this made good "copy," only the facts were lacking. Councilman Lepley is a member of three committees, Light, Public Buildings and Grounds and Streets. He has not been dropped from a single committee by President Millard or anyone else. What did happen was that Clerk Bixler, through an oversight, omitted his name from the new lists that were printed. It was a mistake and an unintentional one, and President Millard had nothing to do with it. Clerk Bixler's Democracy has never been questioned and he was elected Clerk of Council by the Republican organization because he had served as clerk formerly.

"It was all my fault," Clerk Bixler said today. "Those cards will be changed and Mr. Lepley given proper recognition. He has never been dropped. Four new members of Council have been elected since the original committee appointments were announced by President Millard. While assigning them to their proper committees I became confused and inadvertently omitted Mr. Lepley's name. This talk of his being dropped from committees is all bluff."

Anyone who has any knowledge of Councilman Lepley's record and his liberal views and his never hesitating to break with his colleagues on any proposition. The truth is that while Mr. Lepley, a Republican, is allied with the minority organization in Council, the minority leaders know he cannot be "handled." That the majority leaders would slight the one member of the minority who refuses to obey orders from the leaders of his side is too ridiculous to be given a second thought.

Hard Shower
Breaks Drouth

The first hard rain in several weeks fell last evening. The shower began about 8:30 and continued more than an hour. The rain was accompanied by thunder and lightning, some of it severe. The rain poured for a time and after the worst of the shower was over it continued to drizzle. It did inevitable good in the track, garden, lawn and flowers about town.

Other sections of Western Pennsylvania got the benefit of rains more than a week ago, but although the clouds were threatening, only a sprinkling fell here each time. Yesterday afternoon it seemed that the storm would be around the town, but finally it all plentifully.

Last evening was comfortably cool, the mercury taking quite a tumble after the 29 mark was recorded at 5 o'clock. This morning the mercury registered 71 degrees at 8 o'clock and began climbing rapidly. Indications at noon pointed to a scorching afternoon.

Surveying Route of the New Road

Engineer J. B. Hogg started a force this morning surveying the proposed new county road between Pennsylvania and Western. The surveyors will determine on which side of the West Penn tracks it will be best to run the new road, in case it is decided to build it. The road runs from Pennsylvania to Brown street, a distance of 1 1/2 miles.

Councilman Wm. McCormick Is Out Of Politics He Announces This Morning.

Councilman William McCormick, the present minority leader in Town Council, will retire from politics at the end of his present term, according to his present intentions. Mr. McCormick stated this morning that he did not intend to be a candidate next fall unless he is forced to make the race.

Mr. McCormick has represented the Third Ward Democracy in Council for quite a number of terms. At times he had strong opposition, but always got through. The impression has gone forth that since the death of Clair Sullivan, the Third Ward will not pile up its usual big Democratic majority.

the Work.

FRANCHISES AT MEYERSDALE

Western Maryland Will Make Big Cut Through Residential Section and Provide Overhead Crossings—Chief Engineer Pratt There.

Division Engineer E. W. Boots of the Pittsburg & Lake Erie railroad is in town today and reports rapid progress being made by that road on the West Side improvements. Mr. Boots stated that the present force, which is working on day and night shifts, will be largely increased within the next few weeks. The Pittsburg & Lake Erie is working rapidly in order to be in readiness to make connections with the Western Maryland by the time that line's work is completed.

The Pittsburg & Lake Erie is doing its own construction work, down to building the new depot. It had originally been intended to let some contracting firm erect the depot, but this plan was changed. A representative of W. F. Trimble & Sons of Pittsburg is supervising the construction of the new depot and hiring some of the mechanics, but the bulk of the work will be done by the regular Pittsburg & Lake Erie forces, of the bridges and buildings department.

Chief Engineer H. R. Pratt of the Western Maryland was at Meyersdale last night attending a special meeting of the Town Council there. Right of Way Agent J. M. Turner was there also, likewise Attorney Charles F. Uhl, counsel for the Western Maryland. Borough Solicitor Curtis M. Truxal attended the session. The ordinances will be passed Monday evening unless there is a hitch in the arrangements.

The Western Maryland will go through Meyersdale with a cut ranging from 5 to 30 feet. There will be overhead crossings, the railroad to build four bridges at many streets. The Council also demands another overhead bridge and fences along the banks of the cut. The right of way is said to have cost the railroad $50,000. About 25 properties being purchased. The railroad expects to have its grading in the vicinity of Meyersdale completed by next August.

The DANGER TRAIL

by JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

CHAPTER III. THAT FACE AGAIN.

SEVERAL hours later Howland crawled from his bed and bathed his head in cold water. After that he felt better, dressed himself and went below. It was rather with a sense of disappointment than pleasure that he learned the work train was to leave for La Paz late that night instead of the next day. After a quiet hour's rest in his room, however, his old enthusiasm returned to him. He found himself feverishly anxious to reach La Paz and the big camp on the Yukon. Crockett's warning for him to turn back into the south instead of deterring him urged him on. He was born a fighter. It was by fighting that he had forced his way round by round up the ladder of success. And now the fact that his life was in danger, that some mysterious peril awaited him in the depths of the wilderness, but added a new and thrilling fascination to the tremendous task which was ahead of him. He wondered if this same peril had beset Gregson and Thorne and if it was the cause of their failure, of their anxiety to return to civilization. He assured himself that he would know when he met them at La Paz. He would, therefore, where when he became a part of the camp on the Yukon—this is, if the half-breed's warning held any significance at all—and he believed that it did. Anyway, he would prepare for developments. So he went to a gunshop, bought a long-barreled shot or a boister and added to it a hunting knife like that he had seen carried by Crockett.

It was near midnight when he boarded the work train, and dawn was just beginning to break over the wilderness when it stopped at Etowah, from which point he was to travel by hand-car over the sixty miles of new road that had been constructed as far north as La Paz. For three days the car had been waiting for the new chief of the road, but neither Gregson nor Thorne was with it.

"Mr. Gregson is waiting for you at La Paz," said one of the men who had come with it. "Thorne is at Yukon."

For the first time in his life Howland now plugged into the heart of the wilderness. Everywhere lay white winter. The rocks, the trees and the great ridges, which in this north country are called mountains, were covered with four feet of snow, and on it the sun shone with dazzling brilliancy.

The short northern day was nearing an end when once more they saw the broad bank of the Yukon twisting through a plain below them, and on its southern shore the two log buildings of La Paz beckoned in on three sides by the black forests of balsam and spruce. Lights were burning in the cabins and in the Hudson Bay post's store when the car was brought to a halt half a hundred paces from a squat, log built structure, which was more brilliantly illuminated than any of the others.

"That's the hotel," said one of the men.

A tall, old fellow hurried forth to meet Howland as he walked briskly across the open. It was Gregson. As the two men gripped hands the young engineer stared at the other in astonishment. This was not the Gregson he had known in the Chicago office—round faced, full of life, as active as a cricket.

"Never so glad to see any one in my life, Howland!" he cried, shaking the other's hand again and again. "Another month and I'd be dead. Isn't this a bit of a country?"

"I'm falling more in love with it at every breath, Gregson. What's the matter? Have you been sick?"

"Sick? Yes, sick of the job! If this old man hadn't sent me to look after you I would have thrown up the whole thing in another four weeks. I'll warrant you'll get your everlasting fill of log shanties and half-bred and moose meat and that infernal snow and ice before you're home. But I don't want to discourage you."

"Can't discourage me," laughed Howland cheerfully. "You know I never cared much for theaters and girls," he added slyly, giving Gregson a good natured nudge. "How about 'em up here?"

"Nothing—not a cursed thing." Suddenly his eyes lighted up. "By George, Howland, but I did see the prettiest girl I ever laid my eyes on today! I'd give a box of pure Havanas—and we haven't had one for a month—if I could know who she is!"

"A tall girl, with a fur hat and mink?" queried Howland eagerly.

"Nothing of the sort. She was a typical northerner if there ever was one—straight as a birch, dressed in fur cap and coat, short caubon skin skirt and moccasins, and with a broad hand down her back as long as my arm. Lord, but she was pretty!"

"Isn't there a girl somewhere up around our camp named Melissa?" asked Howland casually.

"Never heard of her," said Gregson. "Or a man named Crockett?"

"Never heard of him."

"The deuce, but you're interesting," laughed the young engineer, sitting at the doors of cooking supper. "I'm as hungry as a lion!"

He went outside there came the sharp cracking of a shotgun and Gregson went to one of the small windows looking out upon the clearing. In another instant he sprang toward the door, crying out to Howland.

"By the god of love, there she is, old man! Quick, if you want to get a glimpse of her!"

He flung the door open, and Howland hurried to his side. There came another crack of the whip, a loud shout, and a sledge drawn by six dogs sped past them into the gathering gloom of the early night.

From Howland's lips, too, there fell a sudden cry, for one of the two faces that were turned toward him for an instant was that of Crockett, and the other—white and staring as he had seen it that first night at Etowah—was the face of the beautiful girl who had lured him into the ambush on the Great North trail.

For a moment after the swift passing of the sledge it was on Howland's lips to shout Crockett's name. As he thrust Gregson aside and leaped out into the night he was impelled with a desire to give chase. It was Gregson who recalled him to his senses.

"I thought you didn't care for theaters—and girls, Howland!" he exclaimed tauntingly. "A pretty face affects you a little differently up here, eh?"

Howland interrupted him sharply. "Did you ever see either of them before, Gregson?"

"Never until today. But there's hope, old man. Surely we can find some one in the place who knows them. Would not it be jolly good fun if Jack Howland, Esq., who has never been interested in theaters and girls, should come up into these God forsaken regions and develop a case of love at first sight? If I had only seen her sooner!"

"Shut up!" growled Howland. "Let's go in to supper."

"Good. And I move that we investigate these people while we are smoking our after supper cigars. It will pass our time away at least."

"Your taste is good, Gregson," said Howland, recovering his good humor as they seated themselves at one of the rough board tables in the dining room.

He shot a glance at Gregson as he sat down. "A curious wound," he remarked without looking up. "Funny I didn't notice it before. Your finger was cut off lengthwise, and here's the scar running halfway to your wrist. How did you do it?"

He dropped the hand in time to see a nervous flush in the other's face.

"Why—er—fact is, Howland, it was shot off several months ago—in an accident, of course." He hurried through the door.

As they passed from the dining room into that part of the inn which was half bar and half lounge room, already filled with smoke and a dozen or so picturesque citizens of La Paz, the rough-jawed proprietor of the place inclined to Howland and held out a letter.

"This came while you was at supper, Mr. Howland," he explained.

There was no name at the bottom of what he read. It was not necessary, for a glance had told him that the writing was that of the girl whose face he had seen again that night.

"Forgive me for what I have done," the note ran. "Believe me now. Your life is in danger, and you must go back to Etowah tomorrow. If you go to the Yukon camp you will not live to come back."

"The devil!" he exclaimed.

"What's that?" asked Gregson, edging around him curiously.

Howland crushed the note in his hand and thrust it into one of his boots. "A little private affair," he laughed.

"Come, Gregson, let's see what we can discover."

In the gloom outside one of his hands slipped under his coat and rested on the butt of his revolver. Until 10 o'clock they mixed casually among the populace of La Paz. Half a hundred people had seen Crockett and his beautiful companion, but no one knew anything about them. They had come that forenoon on a sledge, had eaten their dinner and supper at the cabin of a Scotch tie cutter and had left on a sledge.

"She was the sweetest thing I ever saw," exclaimed the tie cutter's wife. "Only she couldn't talk. Two or three times she wrote things to me on a slip of paper."

"Couldn't talk," repeated Gregson as the two men walked leisurely back to the boarding house. "What the deuce do you suppose that means, Jack?"

"I'm not supposing," replied Howland indignantly. "We've had enough of this pretty face, Gregson. I'm going to bed. What time do we start in the morning?"

"As soon as we've had breakfast, if you're anxious."

"I am. Good night."

Howland went to his room, but it was not to sleep. He was satisfied that a mysterious peril of some kind awaited him at the camp on the Yukon, but he gave up trying to find out the reason for this peril, accepting in his businesslike way the fact that it did exist and that in a short time it would probably explain itself. The one puzzling factor which he could not drive out of his thoughts was the girl. Her sweet face haunted him.

He went to bed, but it was a long time before he fell asleep. It seemed to him that he had scarcely closed his eyes when a pounding on the door aroused him, and he awoke to find the early light of dawn creeping through the narrow window of his room. A few minutes later he joined Gregson, who was ready for breakfast.

"The sledge and dogs are waiting," he greeted. As they seated themselves at the table he added: "I've changed my mind since last night, Howland. I'm not going back with you. It's absolutely unnecessary, for Thorne can put you on to everything at the camp, and I'd rather lose six months' salary than take that backside ride again. You won't mind, will you?"

"To be honest, Gregson, I don't believe you'd be particularly cheerful company. What sort of fellow is the driver?"

"We call him Jackpine, a Cree Indian, and he's the one faithful slave of Thorne and myself at Yukon. I'll take care of you and watch after things generally. You'll like him all right."

It was not until they were about to leave the table that Howland's eyes accidentally fell on Gregson's right hand. He gave an exclamation of astonishment when he saw that the little finger was missing. Gregson jerked the hand to his side.

"A little accident," he explained. "You'll meet 'em up here, Howland."

Before he could move the young engineer had caught his arm and was looking closely at the hand.

"A curious wound," he remarked without looking up. "Funny I didn't notice it before. Your finger was cut off lengthwise, and here's the scar running halfway to your wrist. How did you do it?"

He dropped the hand in time to see a nervous flush in the other's face.

It seemed to him that he had scarcely closed his eyes when a pounding on the door aroused him, and he awoke to find the early light of dawn creeping through the narrow window of his room. A few minutes later he joined Gregson, who was ready for breakfast.

"The sledge and dogs are waiting," he greeted. As they seated themselves at the table he added: "I've changed my mind since last night, Howland. I'm not going back with you. It's absolutely unnecessary, for Thorne can put you on to everything at the camp, and I'd rather lose six months' salary than take that backside ride again. You won't mind, will you?"

"To be honest, Gregson, I don't believe you'd be particularly cheerful company. What sort of fellow is the driver?"

"We call him Jackpine, a Cree Indian, and he's the one faithful slave of Thorne and myself at Yukon. I'll take care of you and watch after things generally. You'll like him all right."

It was not until they were about to leave the table that Howland's eyes accidentally fell on Gregson's right hand. He gave an exclamation of astonishment when he saw that the little finger was missing. Gregson jerked the hand to his side.

"A little accident," he explained. "You'll meet 'em up here, Howland."

Before he could move the young engineer had caught his arm and was looking closely at the hand.

"A curious wound," he remarked without looking up. "Funny I didn't notice it before. Your finger was cut off lengthwise, and here's the scar running halfway to your wrist. How did you do it?"

He dropped the hand in time to see a nervous flush in the other's face.

"Why—er—fact is, Howland, it was shot off several months ago—in an accident, of course." He hurried through the door.

As they passed from the dining room into that part of the inn which was half bar and half lounge room, already filled with smoke and a dozen or so picturesque citizens of La Paz, the rough-jawed proprietor of the place inclined to Howland and held out a letter.

"This came while you was at supper, Mr. Howland," he explained.

There was no name at the bottom of what he read. It was not necessary, for a glance had told him that the writing was that of the girl whose face he had seen again that night.

"Forgive me for what I have done," the note ran. "Believe me now. Your life is in danger, and you must go back to Etowah tomorrow. If you go to the Yukon camp you will not live to come back."

"The devil!" he exclaimed.

"What's that?" asked Gregson, edging around him curiously.

Howland crushed the note in his hand and thrust it into one of his boots. "A little private affair," he laughed.

"Come, Gregson, let's see what we can discover."

In the gloom outside one of his hands slipped under his coat and rested on the butt of his revolver. Until 10 o'clock they mixed casually among the populace of La Paz. Half a hundred people had seen Crockett and his beautiful companion, but no one knew anything about them. They had come that forenoon on a sledge, had eaten their dinner and supper at the cabin of a Scotch tie cutter and had left on a sledge.

"She was the sweetest thing I ever saw," exclaimed the tie cutter's wife. "Only she couldn't talk. Two or three times she wrote things to me on a slip of paper."

"Couldn't talk," repeated Gregson as the two men walked leisurely back to the boarding house. "What the deuce do you suppose that means, Jack?"

"I'm not supposing," replied Howland indignantly. "We've had enough of this pretty face, Gregson. I'm going to bed. What time do we start in the morning?"

"As soon as we've had breakfast, if you're anxious."

"I am. Good night."

Howland went to his room, but it was not to sleep. He was satisfied that a mysterious peril of some kind awaited him at the camp on the Yukon, but he gave up trying to find out the reason for this peril, accepting in his businesslike way the fact that it did exist and that in a short time it would probably explain itself. The one puzzling factor which he could not drive out of his thoughts was the girl. Her sweet face haunted him.

He went to bed, but it was a long time before he fell asleep. It seemed to him that he had scarcely closed his eyes when a pounding on the door aroused him, and he awoke to find the early light of dawn creeping through the narrow window of his room. A few minutes later he joined Gregson, who was ready for breakfast.

HOLDING OFF OLD AGE.

Important Advice Governing General Rules of Conduct by an Eminent Carlsbad Physician.

To grow old is as easy as it is to spend money. A few seem to manage to keep young just as some, but not always the same, people seem able to save. Most men and women of middle age wonder how it is possible to do either.

It seems there is a real scientific method of keeping young. Note the following from the Philadelphia Public Ledger:

It is the belief of Dr. Arnold Lorand, physician to the Carlsbad baths, that by following certain general rules of hygiene, individuals can insure important work, "old age deferred" (P. A. Davis Co., Philadelphia, $2.50), a man not only need no longer be "old" at 40 or 50, but may live to be 100, instead of three-score years and ten.

The address delivered by him before the Brussels Royal Society of Medical and natural sciences, Dr. Lorand once described old age as a chronic disease, due to degeneration of the ductless glands, and the advance in particular, and in his present work he holds that there are no amenable to treatment as other chronic complaints.

The work covers the cure of the entire human body, as well as "hygiene of the mind." It deals especially with hygiene of the digestive system, and fully explains how the neglect of nature's indications may have serious results. The work appeals to the common sense, and is of prime importance. Its interest is so vital to all that, while much of it is necessarily technical, the reader's attention never flags. It should be in every house as a work of ready reference.

NESTS IN COLONIES.

Homes of the African Grosbeaks as Big as a Native's Hut.

The biggest bird's nest in the world, not excepting the stork's, is built by the African grosbeak. It is really 100 nests or more bound together with closely interwoven sticks, vines and strands of coarse grass and is not built by a single pair of birds, but by a colony of them. It is of such enormous size that at a little distance it is often mistaken for one of the native huts built in the trees so frequently found in wild tropical countries where man catches animals abound, and the only way to sleep in safety is to "roost high."

The birds usually select a thorn tree, probably because of the protection afforded by the sharp, long thorns against marauders. All around the nest the roof of sticks, thatched with dry grass, projects to let the rain run off. A deep fringe of green boughs from this cork-like tree is certain to keep out any stray drops. These great nests are added to from year to year, each pair of mated birds building on the main nest. Sometimes the nest becomes too heavy, and the branch breaks or the great mass of sticks falls to the ground, destroyed by its own weight. The grosbeak is no larger than an English sparrow and just as gregarious.—New York Press.

THE HALL OF FAME.

GILBERT STUART—Portrait painter, chiefly noted for "Stuart's Wash- ington."

Born Narragansett, R. I., Dec. 3, 1755; died Boston July 27, 1828. He began painting when thirteen, but was in such poverty he had to support himself as an engraver with studying. He took lessons under West in London and returned to America to paint Washington, the most celebrated being in the Boston Athenaeum. He also painted other presidents and other eminent Americans.

A New Wrinkle in Police Court

A new wrinkle was worked in police court this morning when John Edwards was called in from the law.

Instead of being led from the cell department for his hearing before Acting Burgess James B. Millard, on a charge of being drunk. Acting Burgess Millard also added to the unusual incident by sentencing John to finish cutting the city hall lawn instead of doing time before the bar.

Edwards was still showing some effects of his spree yesterday and his answer to the questions of the Acting Burgess were somewhat humorous.

"Where do you live?" asked Mr. Millard.

"In Morris' livery stable," replied John.

Further questioning along this line developed that John sleeps on a cot instead of a feather bed. He admitted being drunk but said he wasn't born in this country.

"I was born in Alabama," he stated. Questioned whether his parents were born there John said they must have been if he was.

Edwards was the only prisoner arrested yesterday and Chief Hotzel gave him an early start on the lawn. John did a good job of it, stopping only twice, once to get a smoke and the second time to stand still and hear sentence passed.

FLED YOU MONEY.

Feed Your Brain, and It Will Feed You Money and Fame.

Ever since boyhood I have been especially fond of money, and I am convinced I am too rapidly, and failed to maintain my food properly.

"The result was that I found myself, a few years ago afflicted with all sorts of ailments, and kidneys, which interfered seriously with my business."

At last I took the advice of friends and began to eat Grape-Nuts instead of the heavy meats, etc., that had constituted my former diet.

I found that I was at once benefited by the change, thus I was soon relieved from the heartburn and indigestion that used to follow my meals, that the pains in my back from my kidney affection had ceased.

"My nerves, which used to be unsteady, and my brain, which was slow and lethargic from a heavy diet of meats and greasy foods, had, not in a moment, but gradually, and none the less, been restored to normal efficiency."

"Now every nerve is steady and my brain and thinking faculties are quick and more acute than for years past."

"After my old style breakfasts I can work till dinner time with all ease and comfort." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in page "There's a row."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

THE ATTACKS UPON SENATOR CROW.

The Uniontown Herald, official organ of special political interests, blames Senator Crow for everything that did and did not happen at Harrisburg this session. It seems that it's all a terrible mistake about Senator Bolen Penrose being the boss of the Republican organization in Pennsylvania. The real boss has been discovered. It's Senator William Evans Crow. He is responsible for everything, particularly certain "vicious legislation" which is construed by our contemporaries as having been aimed at the special political interests which it serves so faithfully, but sometimes serves with more than discretion and always with more fidelity to personal than to party interests. It seems to think that the ambitions of its proprietors must be attained at any cost to the Republican party of Fayette county.

The Herald is either woefully misinformed or willfully misrepresentative. Senator Crow voted for the "vicious legislation" complained of, but he was not the author of any of it, and it might be added that none of it was essentially "vicious." The proposition to require a candidate for District Attorney to be a member of certain courts in which in his official capacity he might be required to practice was not "vicious" or unreasonable legislation, and it had the support of the bar of the State generally. It did not originate with Senator Crow and it bore upon the Fayette county case quite incidentally.

The Excise Commission bill is another measure branded as "vicious" legislation. It originated in Allegheny county, and was in no sense "vicious." There is room for an honest difference of opinion as to its wisdom and expediency. The Courier expressed its doubts about the bill when it was introduced, but pointed out that the actions of some judges in license matters were quite as biased, politically and otherwise, as those of an Excise Commission could possibly be, and that this fact undoubtedly prompted the bill.

The Herald seems determined to maintain its reputation as a persistent disturber of the political peace. It has perhaps done as much as any other agency to disrupt the Republican party of Fayette county, whether through ignorance or design it is not for us to say, but the fact is undeniable. Just now it is apparently radically insurgent.

What the Republican party of Fayette county and the country needs just now is less factionalism and more unity of purpose in the support of those policies upon which our prosperity and happiness depend. Let us give each one his just due, judge him with confidence rather than suspicion and not forget that the strength of our cause lies in perfect union.

THE COAL AND COKE FREIGHT RATE CASES.

The hearing in the rate cases discloses the fact that some Pittsburg coal operators are not making expenses at some of their mines owing to the relatively higher cost of labor, and that the railroads have on a previous occasion been refused the privilege of revising West Virginia coal rates upward with a view to meet the complaints of the Pittsburg shippers concerning their inequity.

It is also announced that the Interstate Commerce Commission has decided that there cannot be two rates to Chicago on Pocahontas coke, and that the discrimination between furnace and foundry shipments must cease.

There is more force to the complaint of the Pittsburg coal shippers than there was to the complaint against this form of coke discrimination. The coal complaint is based upon the length of haul and the profit of the backhaul of coke to Pittsburg furnaces. The coke complaint is based wholly upon the character of the coke, the haul and other conditions being the same.

The railroads had a better defeat in the coke case. It constituted in the almost universal rule of business that lower rates are conceded to larger buyers of all classes of commodities. At least 90% of the coke shipped out of the Connelville region is furnace coke. It is wholesale business while the foundry trade is retail business. There is some measure of justice in allowing wholesale rates to one and applying retail rates to the other.

But if the Interstate Commerce Commission sees in its discrimination against coke consumers, it is difficult to see how it can refuse to regard the coke coal rates as discriminatory and unjust to both producers and consumers of Pittsburg coal.

The virtuous indignation of the Uniontown Herald blows hot or cold according to the exigencies of the occasion. It is justifying the "vicious conditions" just now, but it was the swift defender of the jail scandal, which if we remember correctly was a real scandal.

The Unofficial Organ is not official in announcing that Connelville Leeper had been pushed by alleged Indiana residents by dropping him from certain Connelville committees. "Connelville" is still on all his important committees. The Unofficial

Wall Street More Optimistic Than the Balance of the Country.

(By Henry Clews.)

NEW YORK, May 27.—The financial markets have this week shown some reaction from the enthusiasm created by the Supreme Court's decision in the standard oil case. This is quite natural, especially in view of the expectation that there will be an announcement on Monday by the same tribunal another ruling by which the status of the American Tobacco Company will probably be finally determined. There seems a more or less general sentiment in eminent legal circles, not excluding government circles, that the tobacco decision will not prove as drastic as in the instance of the Oil Company; and this has become so general that it is not improbable that a different result would be the source of some disappointment. That might well be reflected in the general price level. If the decision is not announced on Monday, the entire market will probably be affected by the autumn at least, for the Supreme Court adjourns after its Monday decision until its regular October term.

Advices from various sections of the country show that business generally has not appreciably participated in the enthusiasm of this week's financial center of the country. This, however, is not discouraging from any reasonable viewpoint of general business. The Trust decisions being for all practical purposes out of the way, the threat of a seriously adverse reaction having been measurably removed; the possibility of international complications in connection with the Mexican situation having been eliminated by the obviously prospects for early and permanent peace—all these influences that the financial market has been sufficiently well-served to recognize and properly operate. It remains for trade and industry to in turn appraise them at their proper value.

The fundamental factor in the situation which merits attention is the progress of the crops. We have now arrived at the period when this will be the controlling consideration in the calculations of experienced operators, and for the promise is an excellent one. The average of winter wheat has been largely increased and the conditions of the plant is suggestive of a harvest which will rank with the best of previous years. This planting conditions for spring wheat have been improved and it is estimated that there has been an increase in acreage to percent. The monthly report of the Department of Agriculture, which will be issued early next month, can hardly fail to prove satisfactory in this connection.

Organ is either unduly suspicious or too timid to take up trouble in the Connelville organization, probably both.

The price cutting that has been so spectacularly begun in steel bars and other steel products is a development whose intrinsic value as a stock market influence is difficult to promptly appraise. The spectacular and open part of the cutting was begun by the Republic Iron & Steel Company, which is one of the largest competitors of the United States Steel Corporation, and which is credited with being largely dominated by interests who, in the past, have operated in the steel market in a highly sectionalized way.

The mills of the Steel Corporation promptly met the cut of their competitor, and thus, so far as steel bars are concerned, the policy of agreed prices has been abandoned. The explanation offered on behalf of the Republic Iron & Steel Company is that it has not been receiving its fair share of business because of the cutting of prices by its own smaller competitors. This market for steel products at the moment, therefore, seems to be an open one, and the developments of the next few days will probably indicate the degree of seriousness that this arrangement in the iron and steel industry should be accorded. The current break in the price agreement is a result that frequently compels such agreements. When the demand for the products of the mills is active there is a tendency to reduce prices as a inducement to secure business; when it is a question, however, of the mills securing orders by cutting down and thus impairing their organizations as going concerns, the smaller mills have almost uncontrollably been forced to follow the lead of the larger ones. Their most effective agency in that respect is the steel industry's price than their competitors. The larger concerns stand the uneven competition as long as possible with the hope of holding out until the improvement comes in. Then they jump in and name prices in accordance with the conditions of their previous dominating share of the business. The current iron and steel situation is a merely repeating previous experiences.

The investigation by the Committee of the House of Representatives into the affairs and methods of the Steel Corporation is not unlikely to become the source of some uneasiness among holders of the stock of the corporation. I understand that the Committee will particularly direct its investigation into the question of the financial upheaval of 1910. This, while one of the financial news of the time, is by some considered one of the most vulnerable features of the Steel Corporation's otherwise strong organization.

SCOTSDALE MEN. MAKE AGREEMENT.

Say They Are Going to Advertise Only in the Newspapers.

A REFRESHING RAIN AT LAST

Lawns and Gardens Look Better. While Farmers Say the Rain Last Night Is Just a Starter—Other News of the Mill Town.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTSDALE, May 27.—The merchants and business men of town have concluded that newspaper advertising is the only kind in which they will put their money, excepting occasional personal advertising. They have raised the war cry on all programs, hotel registers, group advertising, blotters, and such things, which appeals to them, they say, as merely junk. This has been a fruitful field for years for programs, hotel registers, big blotters and all those articles. At one time there was an agreement among the merchants that they would confine their efforts to straight advertising. A good many advertised in no way. Others used the newspapers, and some a mixture of newspapers and other forms of advertising, while a lot of others advertised only in church and theater programs and things that were along that plan. They have all tired of this they say and have been circulating a paper this week to secure signatures to join a movement to advertise in only the regularly accepted ways. About 20 firms had signed the paper yesterday.

A Splendid Rain.
All the farmers who come to town today are smiling and congratulating each other on the rain that came last evening, and which they say they believe is a starter for more rain. After another very hot day, following a great modification of the temperature at the beginning of the week, there was a slight shower late in the afternoon. After 6 o'clock there came a genuine rain, and a hail storm, the frozen ice coming down plentifully and in large chunks. Neither the rain nor hail was damaging. The electrical disturbance was long continued, but no harm was caused by the lightning about here so far as known. The rain was badly needed for the crops, the hay being without it about only a third of normal. The gardens and lawns, the fields and roads all look better today.

Sermon Tomorrow.
There will be two special sermons in town tomorrow. In the morning, Rev. D. W. Michael, pastor of the St. Paul's Lutheran Church, will preach to the members of the Grand Army of the Republic and their friends. In the evening, Rev. R. D. Mansell, D. D., will preach to the graduating class of the Scotsdale High School at the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Peace Day Program.
Tomorrow is the Peace Day lesson in the International series and the United Presbyterian Sunday school of which Dr. C. C. Engle is superintendent, has arranged a special program along the line of thought, the Sunday school meeting all in the auditorium. Rev. H. W. Miller, the pastor, is at Washington, Pa., attending the Assembly, and there will be no preaching tomorrow.

RUN-DOWN CONDITIONS

Their Cause and Effect.
Run-down conditions are caused by a lack of iron in the blood and malassimilation of food. One of the unfortunate who have drifted into this state, change your diet, eat foods that are rich in mineral elements of nutrition, and take Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic (with out oil), which supplies iron to the blood in the most easily assimilated form.
A case is reported from Skatoon, Ill.—Mrs. O. M. Watrous was in very poor health for years. She was weak, all run down, no appetite, and only weighed ninety-seven pounds. She had doctor for a long time without benefit. Vinol was recommended. She tried it, and in less than a year she was in perfect health and weighed 127 pounds.
Vinol creates an appetite, restores perfect digestion and makes good, pure blood. In this natural manner it builds up the run-down, weak and debilitated, and replaces weakness with strength.
Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. Graham & Company, Drugists, Connelville, Pa.

Great Record of Dunbar Boy

DUNBAR, May 27.—Sidney Silverman, whose oration, "The Mission of America," was the feature of last evening's graduating exercises of the Dunbar High School, has a remarkable record which shows the value of application, industry and persistence in the quest for knowledge.
Sidney was born in Poland 17 years ago and has been in this country only five years. During the five years past he worked industriously in his father's store, but for two and a half years he attended High School, studied diligently and in the graduation exercises delivered a brilliant oration which received universal commendation.
At the time he came to Dunbar this boy could not speak a word of English. He was raised in Poland, near the German border, and at the age of 11 years he entered the Gymnasium, or higher school, in that country, being the only Jewish boy in a class of 52. He learned the Russian and German languages, but on coming to America had to master English and start on another education.

Sidney is a son of Sol Silverman and the family were brought to Fayette county five years ago by Sol's brothers, G. M. and Isaac Silverman of Uniontown, who are exceedingly proud of the way in which Sidney has improved his opportunities. The boy will attend the Uniontown High School the coming year and later some college with the idea of preparing himself for the practice of law. Sidney has a brother, Oscar, aged 13 years, who will enter the Dunbar High School the coming year. The oration, "The Mission of America," which Sidney delivered Thursday afternoon in patriotic, lofty thought and eloquence and was well delivered. It was a wonderful tribute from a native son of an oppressed country to his adopted America. He declared the United States to be supreme in commerce, intelligence, education and in many other ways, but with this power there is responsibility, and this country's mission is one of light and liberty to show the world that all men are created equal and hasten the onward march of civilization.
A number of the young man's relatives and friends were present from Uniontown as follows: Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Silverman, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Silverman, Miss Ray Silverman, Mrs. Simon Friedman, Maurice Goldberg and Adolph Golden.

Soil Culture for The Farmers

The Pennsylvania railroad is interested in the farmer and has during the past few years issued a number of interesting booklets. The good roads movement has been given considerable attention of late and is bringing results. The light pamphlet issued for the benefit of the farmer is a treatise on the use of dynamite. The booklet is entitled "Intensive Farming and Use of Dynamite."
The chapters of the booklet cover clearing the land, getting the farm in shape, keeping up the farm and expanding and building supplies.
Under the first chapter, clearing the land, attention is given blasting out stumps, felling trees, splitting logs and blasting boulders. Digging ditches, draining swamps, grading road, excavating for building foundations and cellars, sinking wells and digging holes for fence posts, all by dynamite, are covered in the second chapter. In the third chapter are explained the methods of keeping up the farm through breaking up ice gorges, starting log jams and breaking up log roll-ways.
How to handle, use and store dynamite is explained in detail. The volume contains vast amount of interesting information for progressive farmers.

CUTICURA CURES STAY CURED

First Father is Cured of an Eruption that Burned and Itched Day and Night. Then Baby is Cured of a Distressing Rash.

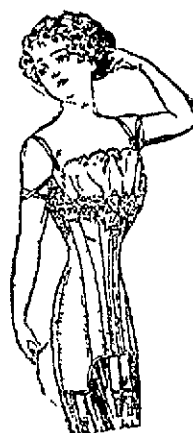

Neighbors Pleased to Find a Cure for Skin Afflictions.

"I suffered for eight years with what the doctors called the 'seven year itch.' This was like small red pimples such as form on the face but they spread and itched, day and night. These pimples were from my ankles up but mostly on my thighs and arms. I tried doctor after doctor but their medicines brought no relief. But at last I struck the right treatment—this was Cuticura. I bought a set of the Cuticura Remedies—Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills—and a few applications brought relief. When I had used about half the set I was nearly cured and after using two full sets I was well and kept of it. I have stayed cured."

"About four months ago, our baby began to be covered with a rash and his head with a spreading sore. Back of the ears, the rash cracked open and the poor baby would scratch all the time. He would not sleep. I then bought a set of Cuticura and with a few applications the rash disappeared. When this little set had gone we had no use for any more so I had my wife buy a full set. She was surprised to find a cure for these skin afflictions. Edward H. Carter, 329 North 9th St., Camden, N. J., May 27, 1911."

Mileage and Other Statistics of the Western Maryland.

The report of the Western Maryland Railroad Company for the six months ending June 30, 1910, which was recently issued in pamphlet form contains many interesting statistics to business men and manufacturers in Western Pennsylvania. The mileage statement which covers the main line and connections of the Western Maryland as represented in the accompanying cut shows a total main track mileage of 643 miles. This covers three States, Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania. Under the head of the Western Maryland railroad there are 102.33 miles of main track between Fulton Junction, Md., and Elk Pool, Md. Then from Elk Pool to Knobmount, W. Va., there is a stretch of track of 59.23 miles. From Cumberland to Belington, W. Va., the Western Maryland stretches a distance of 130.3 miles. Along this main track mileage there are 31.00 miles of second track and 115.61 miles of sidings.

In branches and spurs the Western Maryland has 27.11 miles of main track, 3.21 miles of second track and 33.64 miles of sidings. The longest branch is between South Elkins, W. Va., and Durbin, W. Va., a distance of 16.35 miles. Between Elkins Junction and Huttonsville, W. Va., there is a branch 15.77 miles long. Belington has a connection to Waver, W. Va., a little over six miles long. From Fort Covington, Md., to Walbrook Junction there is a branch extending 6.30 miles. A branch connects Harri-son, W. Va., and Elk Garden in the same State, a distance of 6.99 miles. Between Thomas Junction and Davis, W. Va., there is a little branch into the coal regions which lacks only a fraction of being a mile long. From Harri-manville Junction, W. Va., to Harri-manville, W. Va., a branch 1.20 miles in length serves as a coal feeder.

In leased lines the Western Maryland has the Baltimore & Cumberland Valley railway from Edgemont, Md., to the Pennsylvania State line, 50.3 miles; the same road from the Maryland State line to Waynesboro, Pa., 4.55 miles; Baltimore & Cumberland Valley Railroad Extension, Waynesboro to Shippensburg, Pa., 26.52 miles; Baltimore & Harri-manville railway, Emory Grove, Md., to Orranna, Pa., 58.13 miles; same line, Valley Junction, Pa., to Harri-manville, Md., 4.20 miles; Intersecting, Pa., to Maryland State line, 1.30 miles; Baltimore & Harri-manville railway (Eastern Extension), Porter's Junction to York, Pa., 16.00 miles; Baltimore & Harri-manville (Western Extension) Orranna, Pa., to Highfield, Md., 15.65 miles; Washington & Franklin Railway, Harri-manville North Junction, Md., to Zoumbo, Junction, Pa., 19.11 miles. On these leased lines there are 44.52 miles of second track and 229.92 miles of sidings.

The operating revenues of the Western Maryland for the six months covered by the report were $2,614,067, a gain of $785,657 compared with the six months of the corresponding period of the previous year. The net operating revenue was $1,618,049, a gain of nearly $300,000 for the corresponding period of 1909. Other income on dividends on stocks owned and other revenues brought the gross corporate income up to $1,806,974, from which was deducted $1,138,937 for interest, rentals and other charges which left a net corporate income of $667,937, an increase of $725,972.

Closing his report B. P. Bush, then President of the Western Maryland, says: "During the first six months of the existence of your company the most important developments have been the formation of a traffic alliance with the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad Company and the undertaking of construction from Cumberland, Md., to a connection with the last named system at Conneltsville, Pa. This construction, which has been already materially advanced and is being rapidly pressed, was undertaken through the organization of the Conneltsville & State Line Railroad Company, a corporation created under the laws of Pennsylvania, and through the Georges Creek & Cumberland Railroad Company; the resources required to accomplish this construction were provided by sale of capital stock of your company, authorized at the special meeting of the stockholders held March 31, 1910.

"The traffic alliance and construction above referred to will result in great benefit to your company."

From the General Auditor's statement it is learned that the gross operating revenues for the entire fiscal year aggregated $7,089,857, up in increase of $1,121,111 or 19 per cent. The operating expenses for the year were $1,102,521, an increase of ten per cent. The net operating revenue was $5,987,336, an increase of 32 1/2 per cent. These results reduced to a mileage basis indicate gross earnings of $12,012 per mile per annum, an increase of $2,070, or net earnings of $5,185 per mile per annum, an increase of $1,575. The revenues derived from freight traffic amounted to $3,912,641, an increase of 21 1/2 per cent. Of this an increase of $622,299 is shown in coal and coke traffic and $126,177 in miscellaneous freight, including lumber and all other classes and commodities.

Passenger train service, including mail, express, mail, and miscellaneous revenue from other operations increased $19,654, or 7 1/2 per cent. The ratio of operating expenses to operating revenue was 57.22 per cent, a decrease of 4.28 per cent compared with the year previous.

During the last fiscal year there were 149,245 miles of new 30 pound rail. The main stem between Baltimore and Elkins, W. Va., is now laid with rail weighing an average of 88 pounds per yard.

MINE CODE

For the Bituminous District Passed at the Final Session.

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 27.—The new bituminous mine code, as reported by the Conference Committee, was adopted by the House at the final session by a vote of 129 to 47. With Miss Lulu Willis at the piano the class marched in preceded by the speaker, Dr. F. L. Patton, head of the English Department of State College; Dr. James L. Cochran, President of the School Board; Prof. T. S. Dracien. The program opened by an overture by Kiefer's orchestra of Conneltsville; invocation by Rev. M. S. Flair. Salutatory oration by Miss Mary Lacey, "The School of Life." She said in part, "This evening we are gathered here to witness the passing of our High School life. Experience learned from actual life is far better than from books. We must rise every time we fall, as obstacles are conquered by grappling with failure." She followed this line of thought and proved that school life is only the beginning of a life of earnest, honest effort. The piano duet by the Misses Jeannette Short and Josephine Myers was treasured in a manner that was pleasing to all.

"Our Inheritance From the Romans" by Miss Isabel Townsend took up many ideas that are newly rendered and proved the "Romans greater in peace than in war," teaching a universal peace in life as advanced by Christ. The Romans gave that system to their life that no man actually ruled the government but it was almost a Republic. "The example of Caesar's courage and patience gave us Washington and Lincoln. America's inheritance has the greatest influence today of any nation in the world. America caught and retains the light cast out by the Anglo-Saxon race whose brightness will cast its light down through ages to come."

The Class 1911 Song, with Miss Edna Carson at the piano, was well rendered and showed a spirit of true ring of sincerity that others will try to emulate. The Valedictory oration, "Out of the Harbor Into the Sea" by Richard Robertson brought out that as we go out into the wide world we must depend upon ourselves. Our future success will depend upon the capacity we have laid up in the Perry High School. Our life is now one of struggle and if we have nothing with which to start now we will never have anything. To win we must keep on working and never stop in our ambition to win the goal of well doing faithfully performed.

Prof. F. L. Patton began his address

STEEL FOR MAIL CARS.

Underframes to Be Replaced by July First.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 27.—Railway postoffice cars, with all steel underframes, will be required by the Postoffice Department after July 1. This arrangement was effected today at a conference between Postmaster General Hitchcock and a delegation of railroad officials. It was agreed that the proposed construction was the best to be used in the period of transition between the all-wood and the all-steel railway mail cars.

Peace in Sight for Ohio Miners

CANTON, O., May 27.—An agreement by which it is expected that a strike of 2,600 miners in the Tuscarawas-Sherodsville field, that has lasted within a few weeks of a year, will be settled, was reached here last night at a conference of miners and operators.

The proposition accepted by both operators and miners' committee will be submitted to the Tuscarawas district miners for approval Wednesday. The committee believes the agreement will be ratified.

The miners received an average advance of 1 cent a ton. The agreement provides this scale: Chain machine mining, cutting wide, 18.25 cents a ton; loading, 66 cents a ton; cutting narrow, 22.50 cents; loading, 66 cents; punching machine mining, cutting wide, 25 1/2 cents a ton; loading, 51 cents; cutting narrow, 25 1/2 cents; loading, 61 cents.

PITTSBURG COAL MINED AT A LOSS.

Coal Operator Claims Two of His Mines Lost Money Last Year.

PLEAS FOR LOWER RATES

Hearing Before Interstate Commerce Commission is Adjourned Until June 22 When It Will Be Resumed Again in Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The Pittsburgh coal freight hearing resumed yesterday morning with John W. Bollen on the stand, and adjourned last evening to be resumed here June 21. Mr. Bollen was cross-examined by Mr. Butterfield of the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie and by William Duncan of Cleveland, attorney for the Pennsylvania lines. When John G. Patterson of the Youngbloods and Ohio Coal Company was called to the stand he stated that the Bollen complaint represented the views of the Pittsburgh district operators generally and that with the present rates from Pittsburgh to Ashland Harbor the West Virginia operators would drive the Pittsburgh operators out of that particular lake trade. "I hate to admit it," he said, "but last year at two of our mines it cost us $1.10 a ton to mine coal which we sold at $1.00 a ton."

He told of conferences and attempts of Pittsburgh operators to secure reductions. Mr. Butterfield, in cross-examining Mr. Patterson, drew attention to the fact that as the result of information of the Pittsburgh operators in the early part of 1909 the differential on West Virginia coal was increased 3 1/2 cents in addition to the 24 cents then and now existing; that this increase was enjoyed by the courts and ultimately suspended by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and is now under consideration. Mr. Butterfield then drew attention to a statement in the letter which Mr. Patterson had read sent by the Pittsburgh

Coal Operators' Association to the railroads that the carriers were not lightening this injunction as vigorously as they might, in other words, were not acting in good faith, and that heretofore the operators would appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission. This indicated, Mr. Butterfield said, that the Pittsburgh operators themselves were satisfied with the adjustment of 9 1/2 cents a ton additional on West Virginia coal and it was no fault of the carriers that the adjustment had not been made effective, because it had been enjoined by a court and subsequently suspended by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"So far as the Pittsburgh Coal Operators' Association is concerned," said Mr. Butterfield to Mr. Patterson, "it would be willing for the commission to allow that increase of 9 1/2 cents a ton as a test to see if that was a sufficient spread of the differential."

Mr. Patterson said that the effect of 9 1/2 cents additional per ton on West Virginia coal would be "an imposition on the consumers" which might possibly help the Pittsburgh operators a little, but not appreciably.

Mr. Patterson declared that the proposition to make the increase of 9 1/2 cents on West Virginia coal did not come from the Pittsburgh operators at all. It satisfied some who agreed to make a trial of this additional widening of the differential.

Mr. Butterfield questioned Mr. Patterson upon the subject of mileage from the Pittsburgh district to Ashland Harbor, and elicited the information that the rate was the same from all parts of the district, notwithstanding a difference in some instances of 20 miles, and finally led him to admit that the railroads might be justified in charging more for the longer haul, thus placing mines in the same district at a disadvantage with mines located so as to secure the shorter haul.

J. H. Sanford, vice president and general manager of the Carnegie Coal Company and president of the J. H. Sanford Company, on taking the stand said that the companies he represented operated in the Panhandle district of the Pittsburgh field. He said that the complaint filed by Mr. Bollen represented his views. He said that he had talked with a majority of the operators and that they also agreed with the complaint, but were reluctant to make formal protest, fearing to arouse the displeasure of the railroads. In some instances, he said, the railroads were good customers and in others the operators thought the railroads were good customers and in others the operators thought the railroads would retaliate by shutting off any railroad order, and if an operator who complained wanted to open up a new mine the railroad could make it difficult for the operator to obtain a new siding.

Mr. Sanford, in answer to a question by Mr. Bollen, declared that W. A. Terry, assistant freight traffic manager of the New York Central lines west, told him that his road would reduce their rate, but if it did the West Virginia roads might come down 10 cents a ton.

"Is he the gentleman who stated on the stand at the beginning of this hearing that he had made no such statement?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Sanford, "he is." Frank B. Davis of Columbus, secretary of the Ohio Coal Trade Association, an agent of the Ohio railroads, produced figures showing that the Pittsburgh district coal from the Pittsburgh district to Ashland Harbor over the Pennsylvania lines in 1910 was 2,592,311 tons, and over the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie, 2,221,312 tons, on which 88 cents was charged.

Commencement Exercises Held at Perryopolis High School Last Night.

"Abundant Studies in Mores" were the words above the stage tonight, May 26, with white background and pennants, "P. H. S. '11," betokened the beginning only of the career of a bright class of young men and women as have ever passed from the Perry High School out into the realities of self government.

With Miss Lulu Willis at the piano the class marched in preceded by the speaker, Dr. F. L. Patton, head of the English Department of State College; Dr. James L. The Romans gave that system to their life that no man actually ruled the government but it was almost a Republic. "The example of Caesar's courage and patience gave us Washington and Lincoln. America's inheritance has the greatest influence today of any nation in the world. America caught and retains the light cast out by the Anglo-Saxon race whose brightness will cast its light down through ages to come."

The Class 1911 Song, with Miss Edna Carson at the piano, was well rendered and showed a spirit of true ring of sincerity that others will try to emulate. The Valedictory oration, "Out of the Harbor Into the Sea" by Richard Robertson brought out that as we go out into the wide world we must depend upon ourselves. Our future success will depend upon the capacity we have laid up in the Perry High School. Our life is now one of struggle and if we have nothing with which to start now we will never have anything. To win we must keep on working and never stop in our ambition to win the goal of well doing faithfully performed.
